

Can one Jewish comedian relate to Anne Frank, saintly beacon from one of humanity's darkest chapters?

Now that we find ourselves in yet another dark chapter, come laugh, celebrate, and mourn with Rachel McKay Steele as filtered through tales of her nose-job, Bat Mitzvah, and a one-night stand with a German.

She's trying to meet the moment but showing up fashionably late (with snacks) instead.

Written and performed by Rachel McKay Steele

Directed by Sharon Lennon

Produced by Rhymes with Purple

"A masterclass in tight rope walking... This piece soars. Her ability to land a punchline and then make you cry is astoundingly impressive."

Jaclyn Moore